Excerpt: . . . SUPPLEMENT. The Honorable Charles A. Dewey, a justice of this court from the 25th of May 1837, died at his residence in Northampton on the 22d of August 1866. A meeting of members of the bar of Berkshire was held in Lenox on the 11th of September, at which resolutions were passed, which were presented to the full court on the next day, by Hon. Henry W. Bishop. Before presenting them, Mr. Bishop addressed the court as follows: May it please your Honors: There is a pause in the business of the court. It is made for the members of this bar to express to you their sorrow at the death of one, long associated with yourselves. Judge Dewey is dead. The dark drapery, in which this room is dressed, suspended where he first addressed the tribunals before which he was called to practise in his chosen profession, reminds us of the solemn duty due to his memory. In this room, fifty-two years ago, he entered upon the toilsome duties, and assumed the grave responsibilities of his chosen profession. He, who is deputed by this bar to present the resolutions, which he holds, has that scene fresh in memory. The predictions then made of his sure success have been fulfilled, and more than fulfilled. In early youth he chose his vocation. Paternal experience and wisdom directed its requisite preparation; he was prepared for and graduated at the college in his native town. He was...
